Lightroom 5 has been out for days, and a large number of people have already crashed and burned trying to figure it out. Same with the Early Release Program participants. I don't blame you. Many new features and creative functionality have an almost overwhelming amount of options. Be aware that Lightroom is a very complex piece of software, so you will need a lot of time and understanding in order to master its capabilities. I suggest that you boot up the program, get comfortable, and proceed to figure out how to best utilize each and every feature in order to elevate your photography. Once you feel like you are learning the ropes, then it is time to the next step. Start closing the avenues that you have over explored. Lightroom is a tool that does just that. The more it is used, the better it gets so let it do the rest. Learn to love the way the images look in Lightroom. One of the most significant welcome upgrades to the new software is the Speed Dial capability. This feature lets users save a custom set of frequently used presets that they create in order to accomplish everyday tasks such as sorting images, organizing images, improving image sharpness, and so forth. Initially a separate window, Lightroom now keeps the Speed Dial feature constantly on the left side of the screen where you can find easy access to frequently used settings and functions with a few finger taps. Unlike Photoshop, Lightroom is better organized. The first tab is for browsing your library and the second handles the editing side of things. A third tab lets you access the creative workspace where you can Photoshop your images. It is a comfortable, helpful

However, if you do not want to upgrade your computer to ensure you have a highly optimized powerhouse computer to handle any and all Photoshop tasks, I suggest you explore the Adobe Camera RAW (ACR). Currently, AIR is not supported on web browsers and they are pushing for a web-only app. Camera RAW is both a light RAW file format made for editing and a complete photography workflow built right into Photoshop. Understanding the power of the web, we are able to make Photoshop a web app first with new web technologies. Through an innovative series of applications, Adobe is able to port Photoshop to the web; Adobe's goal for running Photoshop on the web is to bring the same Photoshop effect to the web to make it accessible to all. In the beginning, Photoshop only came as a desktop application. Recent years, it started to become available for mobile and mobile applications to become more habitual. The idea of applying texture, colors, filters, and effects to mobile apps would have been hard to imagine a few years ago. Due to the lack of time to maintain a lot of features in the future, we are deprecating some features that we need to focus on to fix other big issues in the next generation of Photoshop. It is very important for us to focus on the best quality apps for our fans to use. There are a lot of features currently on depreciated which needs to be rebuilt from the ground up. We are taking this step to prioritize what need to be fixed. e3d0a04c9c
